Online Recital Ideas

Introduction

Recitals have long been one of the piano teachers greatest tools to inspire learning in students for many reasons. Students have a motivation to prepare a piece by a deadline at a high enough level of quality to perform for an audience. Parents and friends who watch the recital often base the value of the lessons by what they see in the performance. A good recital makes the teacher and the students look good and consequently has a positive impact on the field of piano pedagogy.

Video performances have a similar positive effect with some significant differences.

1. Recording a video allows students to redo the song until they are pleased with the performance
2. Videos can be shared online with an unlimited number of people.
3. Videos can be watched anytime from anywhere

Video is taking an important role in our society and consequently we find that students are creating more impressive and creative videos. We will discuss ideas that will help you navigate the world of video and the role it plays in the modern piano studio.

Examples

Here are some ideas for how some teachers have been doing online recitals. Some are more difficult depending on your video editing and website design skills. I recommend starting easy.

1. Recital Program with Links - Aaron Garner - Easy
 - With this format you can take your standard recital program and link the student's video.
